

Care Certificate assessment opportunity 5

Review of Progress

This will involve the new care worker:

- Reviewing induction with supervisor/assessor
- Discussing work to date
- Planning on-going development

Description of assessment activity

The new care worker will review progress to date with the supervisor/assessor. They will reflect on something that has happened during their induction which has enabled them to use some of the learning they have achieved since they have started within their role. They will discuss the way they are to work and where they can refer to for guidance if unsure, and why it is important to work in ways that are agreed with their employer. The new care worker will describe what is meant by 'duty of care' and describe how it affects their role.

The new care worker and supervisor/assessor will look at the Care Certificate Standards and identify;

- What they have completed and ensure it is recorded
- What is still to achieve

From this they will develop and complete a plan for further assessment.

A discussion should also take place with the new care worker describing how they have had feedback from the people they are supporting and work colleagues, on their work and how it has assisted their development. They will also explain why this feedback is important.
